ROSS STREET - RED DEER

Bank of Montreal to Open Branch Here.

Without solicitation, so far as we can find out, the Bank of Montreal has leased premises in Red Deer and will open for business here on the 15th of October next. Last week Mr. Winslow, inspector of western agencies, visited the town and leased one of Smith & Gaetz' stores in the block on Gaetz Avenue North, where the Bank will do business until they build for the moment.

Owing to the intimate relationship existing between the C.P.R. and the Bank of Montreal, where the Company do all their principal business, it is surmised that this is an indication that the C.P.R. will in the very near future make a forward movement in the neighborhood of Red Deer, otherwise it would be hard to conceive where the great financial institution would do its business enough to warrant it in coming here. The high standing of the bank places it in the lead of all other institutions, and Red Deer can be congratulated on the evidence of the town's growing importance in the business world.

Red Deer Nurseries, Ltd.

Capital $50,000

The site for the Red Deer Nurseries, Limited, a new company organized, with W. H. Bull, K. C., as one of the leading figures, was selected last week.

The grounds will be present covered with trees, and will be situated east of the Root homestead on the stock farm. Angus McFee, D.L.S., has been secured to survey out the plot and grounds, and work will start this fall on a lot of about 50 x 100 feet. The base will be of concrete, three feet above the ground, on which will rest the glass frames. Other hot houses will follow as required. The grounds will be seeded down to all kinds of nursery stock, and Mr. Marsden will have charge of the expert work in connection therewith as head gardener.

The company, besides, Mr. Bull, will consist of W. Masson Mattocks, of London, England, and Robert Helme, of Lifford, England. These gentlemen were in town last week and arranged to have work begin on this new enterprise, which will be of great benefit to Red Deer. The party left for the coast the same day, but they will be back here again before returning east.

They spoke of picking out a site for an agricultural machinery factory, which may be located this side of the railway tracks of the A.C.R., but more definite information will be given on their return.

This Year's Bumper Crop is Now Nearly All Harvested.

Entire Product of Southern Alberta Saved From Frost

Lethbridge, Sept. 16.—Southern Alberta's bumper 25,000,000 bushel crop is practically harvested. By next Saturday night nearly everything will be in the stock and safe from frost.

The best feature is that the whole crop will be saved without damage from frost with the exception of a very little, probably less than half of one per cent, and this will affect only late spring wheat and some flax.

All the winter wheat is cut; spring wheat is 85 per cent cut; flax, 40 per cent cut; barley, about 80 per cent, and about 10 per cent of the total is ready for the elevator.

Threshing is progressing rapidly and about ten per cent of the total is ready for the elevator.

Big High Class Show Coming.

Manager Babcock, of the local play house, takes great pleasure in announcing to the people of Red Deer and vicinity that he has succeeded in securing Fred Hayman, a great comedy success, "The Missouri Girl," for date of Thursday, September 19th, here.

This is the same show exactly that plays Calgary, Regina, and all the larger cities. The company carries two complete sets of special scenery, the smaller of which will fit the local stage very nicely, thus insuring the complete production the same as seen in the regular city theatres.

As the management here is under a very heavy expense in securing this excellent attraction, it is to be hoped that local theatre-goers will appreciate his efforts to give them first class attractions by packing the house on the above date. Tickets may now be secured at the Gaetz-Cornett Drug Store. Prices 50c, 75c, $1.00.

The Crops

The farmers have had a good opportunity the last two weeks to get their grain cut, and most of them have taken full advantage of the splendid weather. A great part of the grain is now cut, but there is still a considerable amount standing, some of the grain is still standing, maturing owing to the backward season. The yield is reported very heavy everywhere. Some little barley and wheat has been hurt by frost, but oats were little, if at all, injured. The first snowstorm has held off later than usual this year, and therefore the grain is still standing, but it never pays to take too many chances, and even if the grain is cut somewhat green it will still later. Some land is too soft to hear the binder yet but it is hardening up fast.

Typhoid in North Red Deer

Several cases of typhoid fever developed in North Red Deer a few days ago, and Medical Health Officer, Colborne, and the Provincial Health Inspector made a close inspection. Four cases were reported in one house, all young men, and two of them are very sick. The disease was located in a filthy outhouse and a well. Stringent measures were taken to destroy all terms by burning and burying. The Medical Health Officer requests great care at this time of year, and asks that a proper receptacle be used to hold all slops, and that great care be taken to cover up any filth thrown on the ground. No slops should be thrown in the lanes or back yards, as it is apt to lead to disease.

Calgary Wins The Pennant For Western Canada League

In the sixth game of the series at Calgary on Saturday the Bronchos had an easy win, and by it won the championship of the Western Canada League, as it was their fourth win. The Deers won two games, both of them being on their home grounds. Calgary won all their games at home and one at Red Deer, and it can hardly be said that they did not deserve to win as there has only been one game of the series that has been a close one. Red Deer has been a little weaker in the pitching staff, though both Dickenson and Manning have won one good game, but Dunn only lost by hard luck and poor pitching on the part of his teammates. But Calgary has three strong pitchers and Hanken pitched three of his four games last week, winning two of them. Meyers won out against Dunn though he was hit twice to Dunn's one. Standridge and Manning broke even in their games. The last game at Calgary was won in the second inning, when Calgary got seven runs off Daniels. The final score being 13-5. It was thought that Daniels would not try the pitching stunt at all this series, as he is a top notch fielder, but Bill put him in on Saturday and, though he allowed no runs in the first, the second innings was disastrous. The only close game of the series was on Thursday last at Calgary, when Dunn sprung quite a surprise by only allowing one hit, but Meyers was nearly equally strong as he only allowed two bounces, and Calgary played a little the best ball and won out in the ninth inning, as the direct result of an error, by the score of 2-1. On Friday it was a good game here, though Standridge was pretty well hit and was hit freely, the final score being 12-3 in Red Deer's favor. Red Deer has been stronger in the outfield than since Clementson left, but Holmes has been missed at third, as Brennan is inclined to wild throwing at times. Gay has been a little weak at short stop. In home runs he has probably been the strongest man on the team and he is a good run-getter. As was said before, the games, outside of the one at Calgary, have not been very close, and two or three of them have been runaway scores. Dwyer as umpire is not thought much of, but he had Raymond to help him out in the last few games.

Reviewing the year, it has been as Mayor Welliver prophesied at the start. Red Deer has supported their team from start to finish, and do not blame them for losing the pennant. In fact, the team did better than could have been hoped for in winning the first series against such places as Edmonton and Calgary, who have so much more money at their command. When Chandler threw up his job it looked for a while as if the team would be withdrawn from the league, but on account of the public spirit of some of our citizens it was placed on a firm footing till the end of the season, and though it has been a losing concern directly, perhaps there have been unseen results in the way of advertising, etc. It is a little early to speculate on what Red Deer will do next year, but there are many who would like to see them have another try at the pennant if the League is carried on. It has been surprising to note that Calgary, though a winning team the last half of the season, has not drawn the crowd that Red Deer team has. Taking things altogether, we cannot say that Red Deer's break into professional ball has been a disappointment at all. In fact, it has been a wet season, too. Perhaps it has hurt amateur ball to a certain extent, but that has its compensations also, as many of our amateur players will have a new knowledge of the game.

Champion Cow of Canada

Rosalind of Old Basing Closing Her 3-Year Test

Mr. C. A. Julian-Sharman's famous champion cow, "Rosalind of Old Basing," closed her third consecutive year of official test a few days ago, but she was doing rather better at the end than at the beginning, so the dates may be slightly changed owing to her being in the pen longer than the first closing date selected. Her three year record places her away at the head of Canadian cows, no other cow in Canada reaching near her record, while her this year's record has rarely been surpassed in Canada in a twelve months' test. THE DIAMOND CIPHER clumsy and hard to handle, the lock stuck, gripped the key like a thing of malice and hostile wishes, and when Brockett, elated only in the chase of slumber, finally burst into the hall, with Solano at his heels, not a soul was visible. Retreating hurriedly to the room, Brockett caught up his coat and ran a trembling hand into his pocket. They were empty—no secret messages and cipher, all were gone.

By W. A. PHELON

—A New and Original Mystery Story of the Great National Game—

Stopping only to draw on a few necessary garments, the boys, who, faced, almost abrogating, flung themselves into the hall, and sprinted to the elevator. As they rushed frantically forward, they smashed heavily into a large, middle-aged gentleman who was just turning in from a cross-hall. The large, middle-aged man, with surprising quickness and dexterity, harpooned each of them with a huge and mighty hand, and, with amazing agility, held them unwavering prisoners.

"In my search a hurry, mein young freind," laughingly spoke the Baron Zoller.

W. W. COLLINS,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

CHAPTER XVI.

Baron Zoller had been a mighty man at home in Germany. Stories of his strength and his tremendous deeds were talked from Mainz to Danzig, and it was even said that his great countryman, Eugene Sandow, would have found it no easy task to cope with the Baron in physical achievement. The Baron, however, was now in the position of a man who tries to hold a wildcat with each hand, and even his strength might have proved insufficient to restrain the kicking, slugging captives had not half a dozen bulky fellows—Germans, a dozen of them—sprung up as if by magic all around the trio. Surrounded and outnumbered, the boys had sense enough to quit fighting, and stood gasping, dazed, glaring at the Baron and his retinue. Zoller, still smiling, in spite of his painful bruises on shins and countenance, and the enormous weight of the two men who were now in a tone of the utmost friendship and good-bum.

"My so unruly, young gentlemen? Vat haf I ofer done dat you should be so abuss?"

"You have done enough," snapped Brockett, "to get yourself put away for the year to come. You have proved yourself a German spy, and even this country doesn't deal very gently with that kind of yellow dog. Give me back my messages, and let me go, or you'll know what a jail looks like from the inside."

Baron Zoller laughed amusedly.

"How could I," he gurgled, "if you back your documents when I haf den not got meinsel as yet? Chusert dot I vill haf dem in a very few minids, and den ve vill see apout giffing dem back alreedy. At present, I half den not, so vy such exaltations."

"You are a liar," snarled Solano. "The papers were stolen not five minutes ago, and you have them in your pocket now."

"No, no, aber nit," chuckled the Baron. "Gif me time. De bapers vill be here, in mein oger hand, in a few minids, but vy andicahet? Two off me men search de clodings of dese young men, and bring me val-off documents dere may be me concealed derin."

"You don't need to search," said Brockett. "Some of your lackeys took the papers from my coat a few minids ago. Pished for them over the transom, and got them. It was a nice trick—but I suppose I ought to give you credit for it."

"Pished for dem? Ofer de transom?" queried the Baron. "No indeed. Dot has not de vat I intendet to acquire dese documents. Not at all. It was my intenchens to make you de way. He dragged a chair to the door, stood up, and examined the inside of the door. Then he returned to the wondering group again, his face a strange commingling of purple, white and crimson.

"It has as you haf said," he rambled, half-chokingly, "somebody, climbed on de chair, flased ofer dot transom. Let me see your coat. Ah—ha—ya, ya, dere les de blue vere a coat caught in de fabric. You haf told de truth. You vere robbed by a skilful fisherman, mit a line and hook, obersted drough de transom. It vos cleefor work."

"Some one of your people," exclaimed Solano. "Why don't you get the papers from him, if you are so wild about them?"

The Baron turned his mottled, anguished face upon the speaker. "Young gentlemen," he cried, raising his right hand high, "as dere is a Gott, as I love and honor de Cherman Kaiser, no man off mein haf done dreeg De chusert been built, by somevon else, somevon to whom dese bapers vas as valuable as to me or you. Ve haf both been fooled, and I am de bigger fool off two foot of dem."

There was no mistaking the ring of honesty in the German's voice. There was no mistaking the look upon his horror-stricken visage. He had been baffled at his own game, and, in the very trap he had prepared, and been beaten to the prize by some unknown scoundrel. Brockett, heart sick and desperate, could not help but, in the midst of his own troubles, with the disappointed Teuton. For several minids Baron Zoller, cowering and unclenching his hand, the convulsed color playing back and forth across his face, leaned heavily against the wall. Then he shook himself together, and forced a grin smile to his lips.

"I blanned it vell, young chentlemen," said he. "You vunder how it vos dot I could de such things in dis hotel? Dot vos easy—but veerully exensable. Last night, before you had been in de place an hour, I bought de hotel. Made de acquisition off de brocktor. Told him I must make an investment, must make it, Himmel, so sudden! Asked him de price off de hotel, but he haf me himself mood liberal! Den and dere I laid down de money, de grip American dollar, with half a million in full possession off de house, vit some faithful employees at my command. I vos de quickest transaction in hotel brocktorien on record, ya! Told id vos all for de good burso—and id vos all vased."

"Can't say we are sorry for your troubles," spoke up Solano. "The question is—what are you going to do with us?"

Baron Zoller shrugged his wide shoulders. "I believe," said he, "dot ve must come to a gombromise. You haf lost your documents, I haf not secured dem. Ve are both in, vot you call id—a dell of a fix."

"In all probability," cut in Brockett, "your dear friend, Yachimoto, has the papers now."

"If so," sighed Baron Zoller, "dot does me no good—absolutely no good. Mein young freinds, nations change der alliences even as men change dem. Herr Yachimoto and meinsel haf longer intereds in gommun. To him, your documents are off exceeding value—and to me as vell—aber, neider off us now wishes to share dem mit de ofer."

"All of which," said Ramon Solano, "has no bearing on that question—what are you going to do with us?"

Baron Zoller debated, interiorly, for five minutes before he spoke.

"Young gentlemen," said he, "I believe dot I can gif you der liberry mitout de leasd gomburichens. Under de circumstances, you vill hardly care to tell spout de alledged robbery of your bapers, nor, in any case, to charge id to me. Moreofer, if I turn you loose, you vill mitout a doubt, do your utmost to recover your documents. Dot vill gif me, bossily, an ofer chance to dake dem away from you. I vill release you. Ve vill both start de hunt for de stolen bapers—and may be head hunter vin. In broof off de good vill I bear you, de money you vos paid for dese documents shall be giften back to you. Vill you also do me de honor to dake break fast mit me in mein new hotel?"

CHAPTER XVII.

"I thought," said Solano, as the unhappy adventurers walked mournfully through the Chicago streets, "that you had your messages, your money, and everything else of any special value in a leather belt that you wore next to your skin."

"I certainly did," sighed Brockett, "but the belt had chafed my skin. I took it off last night while

I gave myself a rubdown, and when I went to bed I tucked it into the inside pocket of my coat. Just forced it on the floor, as you might say. He's got the goods; his government will have them as quickly as he can turn them over—and I suppose I might as well try to locate a position of some kind here in Chicago. I haven't the nerve to go back to Washington after this. The chief might not even say a word about it, but I'd set down as a rank failure in his mind forever."

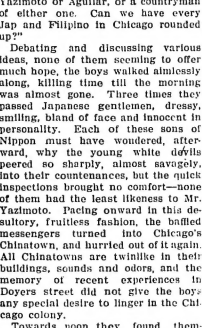

"Why give up so soon?" the Cuban said encouragingly. "Let's make one last effort to get back the letters. Luck has broken wonderfully well for us so far along the road—it might stick by us now."

"I'll do anything that you suggest," Brockett acknowledged, "but the chances are about a million to one against us. What course would offer any possibilities?"

"We might report the theft to police headquarters, simply stating that you and I had a leather money-belt, naming the amount of currency, and saying nothing as to the papers or letters."

"Description of theft," dolefully remarked Brockett, "is what we need. What was that about all I saw of him. It might have been either Yachimoto or Aquilar, or a countryman of either one. Can we have rounded up Jay and Filippino in Chicago every day?"

"Debating and discussing various ideas, none of them seeming to offer much hope, the boys walked aimlessly along, killing time till the morning was almost gone. Three times they passed Japanese gentlemen, dressed, smiling, bland of face and innocent in personality. Each of these sons of Nippon must have wondered, afterward, why the young white devils peered so sharply, almost savagely, into their countenances, but the chief inspections brought no comfort—none of them had the least likeness to Mr. Yachimoto. Picked onward in this solitary, fruitless fashion, the baffled messengers turned into Chicago's Chinatown, and hurried off of it again. All Chinatown are twinkle in their buildings, sounds and odors, and the memory of recent experiences in Dopey street did not give the boys any special desire to linger in the Chicago colony.

THEY WALKED WEARILY ALONG, CLEARING AS THEY WENT THE BOUNDARIES OF THE BLACK BELT, AND ENTERED AN UNPRETENTIOUS RESTAURANT WHERE THEY COULD AT LEAST TALK OVER THEIR UNPLEASANT SITUATION.

They had been in this solitary, fruitless fashion, the baffled messengers turned into Chicago's Chinatown, and hurried off of it again. All Chinatown are twinkle in their buildings, sounds and odors, and the memory of recent experiences in Dopey street did not give the boys any special desire to linger in the Chicago colony.

Towards noon they found themselves in a district as intensely black in population as Hayti or Maranhão—a region that might have been interesting to them under ordinary circumstances, but which was now anything but attractive to the heartless adventurers. They walked wearily along, cleared as they went the boundaries of the black belt, and entered an unpretentious restaurant where they could at least talk over their unpleasant situation. They had been in a half-bested lunch before they noticed that the other patrons of the place were all brunettes, of various shades between lamplack and burnt saddle-color, but the discovery did not worry them. In their state of mind they would hardly have raised objections if they had been seated at the same table with a band of gorillas.

At the next table a bulky black waiter, whose billywig figure was draped in most of the colors of the rainbow, and who fended off the intrusions of the waiter by explaining that she was "waitin' for a gentleman," the "gentleman" came in a moment later, and proved to be a colored man of gigantic stature, but the magnitude of person that the large negroess herself was dwarfed before. This man, whom Zoller, seated himself comfortably, grinned delightedly at the woman, and summoned the waiter with a lordly wave of his hand.

"That fellow is a twin to the one who handed us the message in Detroit."

THAT FELLOW IS A TWIN TO THE MAN WHO HANDED US THE MESSAGE IN DETROIT.

ready money, done buy de hotel, an' gib us all one houn's notice to git out. Said he had people of his own dat he'd put in to do de work. He done paid me for de whole week, so Ah had no kick comin'."

"You suttinly an lucky, Sam," commented the billywig black lady.

"Ah, hon, dat ain't nuffin," laughed the big fellow. "Jes' yo' wait till Ah done tell yo' eberyting? Ah didn't feel like goin' out huntin' no place to sleep, so Ah simply slips out, slips in agin—de Dutch pash was too busy to notice anybody comin' or goin'—an' picks out an empty room dat Ah knowed of on de fourth floor. Ah gets up good an' early, an' stabs down de hall, real quiet-like, when what should come bampin' into me, hon, but a man. A lil bit of a man, hon—lil brown man, jes' like a Chinaman, an' Ah nab him right plum into me, an' Ah nab him grab him. Couldn't let Ah nab him bump into me dataway, an' not even ax him whar he think he gwine to go."

"An' what den, Sam?" queried the woman, grinning as widely as the glass in the window of the station.

"The big fellow almost shook under a gale of chuckles.

"Ah den, hon," he resumed, "Ah jes' happened to notice somevon he had in his hand. Says Ah to him, 'Lil brown man, whafso' yo' run round? He dis houn' ob de mawtin', carryin' "

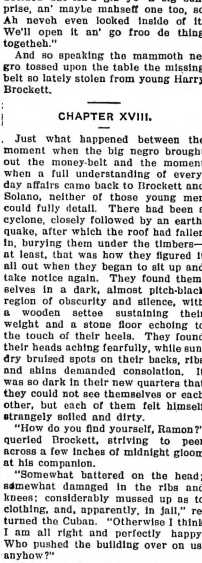

THEY WALKED WEARILY ALONG, CLEARING AS THEY WENT THE BOUNDARIES OF THE BLACK BELT, AND ENTERED AN UNPRETENTIOUS RESTAURANT WHERE THEY COULD AT LEAST TALK OVER THEIR UNPLEASANT SITUATION.

They had been in this solitary, fruitless fashion, the baffled messengers turned into Chicago's Chinatown, and hurried off of it again. All Chinatown are twinkle in their buildings, sounds and odors, and the memory of recent experiences in Dopey street did not give the boys any special desire to linger in the Chicago colony.

Towards noon they found themselves in a district as intensely black in population as Hayti or Maranhão—a region that might have been interesting to them under ordinary circumstances, but which was now anything but attractive to the heartless adventurers. They walked wearily along, cleared as they went the boundaries of the black belt, and entered an unpretentious restaurant where they could at least talk over their unpleasant situation. They had been in a half-bested lunch before they noticed that the other patrons of the place were all brunettes, of various shades between lamplack and burnt saddle-color, but the discovery did not worry them. In their state of mind they would hardly have raised objections if they had been seated at the same table with a band of gorillas.

At the next table a bulky black waiter, whose billywig figure was draped in most of the colors of the rainbow, and who fended off the intrusions of the waiter by explaining that she was "waitin' for a gentleman," the "gentleman" came in a moment later, and proved to be a colored man of gigantic stature, but the magnitude of person that the large negroess herself was dwarfed before. This man, whom Zoller, seated himself comfortably, grinned delightedly at the woman, and summoned the waiter with a lordly wave of his hand.

"That fellow is a twin to the one who handed us the message in Detroit."

THAT FELLOW IS A TWIN TO THE MAN WHO HANDED US THE MESSAGE IN DETROIT.

Just what happened between the moment when the big negro brought out the money-belt and the moment when a full understanding of every detail came back to Brockett and Solano, neither of those young men could fully detail. There had been a cyclone, closely followed by an earthquake, after which the roof had fallen in, burying them under the timbers—at least, that was how they figured it all out when they began to sit up and take notice again. They found themselves in a dark, almost pitch-black region of obscurity and silence, with wooden settees sustaining their weight and a stone floor echoing to the touch of their heels. They found their heads aching dazedly, their sun-dried brains spots on their backs, ribs and shins demanded consolation. It was so dark in their new quarters that they could not see themselves or each other, each of them felt himself strangely soiled and dirty.

"Remembered battered on the head; somewhat damaged in the ribs and knees; considerably mauled up as to clothing, and, apparently, in jail," returned the Cuban. "Otherwise I think I am all right and perfectly happy. Who pushed the building over on us, anyhow?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," ruefully responded Brockett. "All I can remember is making one grab at that negro, while you tried to seize the belt. Then things seemed to go round and round, and I began to look through a dark haze at the glowing stars. Did things impress you that way?"

"Pretty much so," Ramon answered. "I distinctly remember having one hand on that belt, and the other hand on that large black man's necktie.

WATER TANKS AND RESERVOIRS DISCUSSED

Engineer Dawe Gives His Opinions

At the Council meeting Monday evening of last week Engineer Dawe submitted the following report as to giving water to the higher levels of the town. Owing to the state of the financial market, the Council concluded to wait a little while before going seriously into the proposition. To the Commissioners.

Sirs,—Pursuant to a meeting recently held in the office of Mr. R. B. Welliver, at which were present the Commissioners, the representative of the Western General Electric Co. and ourselves, and at which was discussed the erection of an elevated tank on the site already purchased for that purpose by the town; the regulation of pressures also being discussed to some extent. We were instructed, in the absence of sufficient information, to obtain the necessary details for an intelligent investigation, and we were further instructed to hold another interview with the Western General Electric Co., come to some conclusion, and report to you.

We have had an interview with the Western General Electric Co. and beg to report as follows:

1. The proposed site for an elevated tank, in our opinion, is not so suitable and as central as it might be. One objection, although of no practical significance, is its proximity to the cemetery; the other, and more important objection is that in future it not only will be necessary to supply domestic pressure to Highland Park, Inglewood and Hillside, but also to the newer subdivisions south of the town as well as to the already somewhat important subdivision known as Red Deer. A tank erected on the high land south of the town would be more central to all above mentioned districts and the location for elevated tank is suitable. We would recommend it possible that a new site be purchased somewhere in the vicinity we have indicated.

2.—It was concluded at the meeting mentioned that the ideal solution to the problem of supplying proper pressures to the higher levels of Red Deer as well as a gravity pressure to the down town district would be by erecting not only an elevated tank of about 100,000 gallons capacity but also a storage reservoir of some 250,000 gallons capacity. The elevated tank would furnish domestic pressures for the upper levels as well as a good pressure for the business section of the town.

3.—For supplying water to the elevated tank there are two methods which might be followed, each having the following advantages and disadvantages respectively. One method would be by a separate pipe line to the elevated tank through which water might be pumped into it direct from the pumping station against a head of about 85 lbs. This would in time cause considerable wear and tear on the pumps, increasing the load, in fact, to something even double to which they are working at present. We might also say that a continued pressure of 85 lbs. would be more liable to cause leaks in water mains, than one of about 40 lbs., particularly in the portion of the town where wooden pipe has been used. The alternative method would be to pump to a reservoir of about the capacity we have stated, which would require only the pressure approximately of that mentioned.

ed in the contract already existing between the town and the Western General Electric Co., and by means of a substation, pumping as to the reservoir into the elevated tank against a similar head, namely about 40 lbs. pressure. The pressure from the reservoir would be necessary to only pump from the substation the amount of water required for domestic uses on the higher levels and by means of proper valves the substation could furnish fire protection for the down town district by pumping against a lesser head by half of that which is required at present.

We believe that the second method outlined, namely, that the reservoir and substation would be in the end most satisfactory on account of the elimination of pumping against high head and the advantage gained by storage of a considerable amount of water which would be available at any time. While the town may financially be incapable of carrying out this project in full, we would advise that whatever is done be toward that end. For instance the tank could be erected possibly this year and the reservoir installed at some future date. The tank could furnish the pressure required for the higher levels.

The cost of the elevated tank will be, as already indicated to you about $10,000, including foundation. The installation of a reservoir would cost approximately $2500. Valves and special connections necessary for operation would be about $1000. The cost of the auxiliary pump would be approximately $2000. We might say that the auxiliary pump would be operated electrically on steam driven.

Firemen's Smoker

On Tuesday evening, September 10, the Firemen held a very successful smoking concert, in honor of having won the piano at Murphy's store last winter. The piano which has only recently arrived, is a first class instrument and the boys are just proud of it. Chief Meeres opened the proceedings by a short speech, which was straight to the point, and thanked most heartily those present, and those away, who had helped to win the piano, also stating that it was not an individual affair and that in reality the gift was a gift to the town as the brigade was continually changing, also that the piano was an incentive for the boys to spend their evenings in the hall. Ed. Welton opened the musical proceedings with a piano solo, which was much appreciated, and was heartily applauded. Chief Meeres, who was in the chair next called on Percy Kent as an old and tried friend in the musical line. Percy obliged by singing a good song in his old style, which took very well. He was in good form and during the evening he sang three more songs, giving the "White Squall" as a final.

Chief Meeres next introduced Mr. H. Webb, a friend of Mr. Meeres' just out from the Old Country. Those present had a treat little expected, for Mr. Webb is a musician of the first class, giving selections on the harp, guitar, fairy bells, one-string violin and bones. He was repeatedly cheered and deservedly so. Next called upon Mr. H. George, who recited "Lord Tom Noddy" in good style; the doctor is always ready to help. Another good turn was a pianoforte solo by the same camp who showed that he also was an adept in that line. Rubie Ger, who wanted to bark out but was not allowed, next sang three more songs, giving the "White Squall" as a final. Chief Meeres next introduced Mr. H. Pronounced Dead Now Alive and Well

Winnipeg, Sept. 13.—Pronounced dead by a qualified physician, laid out in his house while authority was being sought from the coroner to bury him without inquest, resuscitated by another physician after a short inspection had suspected a spark of life and today about 10 o'clock of Winnipeg, is the strange experience of S. Musick, No. 1009 Redwood avenue. Had it not been for a series of coincidences Musick would have been buried alive, probably to awake out of his comatose condition only to be suffocated.

Musick was found to all appearance dead in his bed and after an examination Dr. Knight pronounced life extinct. The coroner, however, was not quite satisfied with the story that reached him and, possibly suspecting foul play, sent Inspector Macdonald with a constable to get evidence. While watching by the body the other thought he detected a slight movement of the blankets. On this being repeated Dr. Hervey, the physician drove off some blood serum from the spinal canal with the result that reflex action returned and with some care the man was on his feet by morning.

SHOCKING FATE OF WHITE GIRLS

Letter From the West

Employment of White Women by Orientals is a Case for Social Reformers to take up.

Montreal, Aug. 30.—The employment of white female labor by Chinese is a matter dealt with in a communication received by Rev. T. F. Bourke, Secretary of the United Methodist Social and Moral Reform Committee of this city from Rev. T. Albert Moore, general secretary of the Social and Moral Reform Department throughout Canada. Dr. Moore forwarded a copy of a letter written by a prominent citizen of Saskatoon in which the writer refers to the matter of female labor in Chinese establishments as constituting a grave moral peril.

MEET SAID FATE. "Through the three prairie Provinces and British Columbia," he says, "these Oriental almond-eyed anthropoids own a large proportion of the country hotels, and are found working side by side with white women in almost all of our hotels and restaurants. In Western Canada, especially, we have mentioned, are working under these harpies and with them for sixteen and sometimes as many as eighteen hours a day."

The writer goes on to say that from certain knowledge many of them afterwards go down into the underworld to suffer a fate worse than death. "You who make a business of writing social evils must take this one into consideration. Each day's delay means scores of Canadian women lost to decency, and shames our country in the eyes of all moral nations."

Rev. T. F. Bourke is of the opinion that social reformers should face the question of encouraging Chinamen to bring their wives by lowering the tax or barring them altogether. He told a story of having a Chinaman come to him some months ago with a fine looking English-speaking girl to be married. He did not perform the marriage and both parties left in great disappointment.

THE BOARD OF TRADE

The regular meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the Odd Fellows Hall on Tuesday evening, Sept. 10th, at 8.15 o'clock, with President G. W. Greene in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The committee appointed to report regarding the interurban railway submitted the following report: "The undersigned committee, appointed to report on the incorporation of an interurban railway radiating from the Town of Red Deer, beg to report as follows:

1. We recommend that application be made to the Provincial Legislature of Alberta for the incorporation of a charter for an interurban railway.
2. That the lines radiating from Red Deer be those suggested in the report of the Committee, dated the 12th of March, A. D. 1912.
3. That the expense of obtaining the charter be borne by the Board of Trade.
4. We recommend that as many representatives as can be obtained from Councils of the Local Improvement Districts from the area traversed, be requested to join in the application for the charter.
5. That the matter, if meeting your approval, should be submitted to solicitors for the purpose of having the work carried on.

Respectfully submitted—
G. W. GREENE, R. L. GAETZ, R. B. WELLS.
The Council of the Board of Trade recommended that the Board take steps to secure incorporation. The action of the Council was endorsed on motion of Messrs. H. Wallace and G. W. Smith.
The Commissioner then made his report on the work undertaken since the last meeting. The Council of the Board of Trade held six meetings, at which they had considered the establishment of a cement brick plant, the running of a special train to the fair, the entertainment of different visitors, advertising, Dry Farming Congress, interurban railway, applications for aid from the Imperial Home-Red Union Association, and the resignation of the Commissioner.

The Secretary had received word that the Local Option referendum would probably be brought on early in November.

A letter from the engineer of the Hudson Bay and the Red River Company, at Prince Albert, explained that the company was in liquidation.

The Red Deer Board of Trade has been represented at the convention of the Panama Canal in Calgary, and the proceedings had been reported in the press.

Regarding the Imperial Home-Red Union Association, $1271.83 had been paid out in the fund fares, and against the date found owed the bank some $521.00.

Letters were read from several men thanking the Imperial Home-Red Union for the kindness in helping to bring out their wives and families.

Regarding office work: There had been 697 calls at the office, and there were sent out 420 letters, 23,076 pamphlets and maps, over 100 photographs to illustrated papers, to the C. G. P. and the Government agents, and a number had been published and the others were on exhibit in Eastern Canada and the Old Country. Over 120 farm hands had been placed. Considerable time had been given to the helping of the Horticultural Society, and more than a week's work of the office given to assist the Red Deer Fair.

A letter was read from the Secretary of the Canadian Highway Association asking that the Board of Trade send delegates to the convention to be held in Winnipeg, Oct. 9th to 12th. The President reported that he thought Red Deer stood a good chance to get the Canadian Highway to run through here to the Yellow Head Pass, and felt that the Board would be wise to take an interest in this or any movement for the betterment of the roads. After some discussion, it was moved by Messrs. G. W. Smith, J. Malom, that the President, G. W. Greene, be appointed representative of the Red Deer Board of Trade to the convention. Carried.

In accordance with instructions of the Council a petition re: the establishment of more land titles offices throughout the province, was presented to the meeting, and it was suggested that the co-operation of the Boards of Trade throughout the Red Deer and adjacent districts should be enlisted to circulate this petition. It was moved by Messrs. R. B. Wells, R. L. Gaetz, that copies of this resolution be struck off and sent to the Boards of Trade in Central Alberta and that their aid in circulating them be asked. Carried.

The Secretary stated that in connection with the negotiations with F. E. Acherman Co., that Mr. H. H. Gaetz had taken considerable time and had been at expense in calling at Peterboro, when he was in the east, that he would not put in any bill for expenses to the Board of Trade. It was therefore moved by Messrs. Davidson and Best that the thanks of this Board of Trade be tendered to Mr. Gaetz for his efforts on behalf of the Board of Trade. Carried unanimously.

Mr. H. Wallace then spoke, telling of the prospects of locating a flax mill here, and that he had enlisted the services of the Board of Trade to secure the necessary information to submit to the parties interested. Mr. Wilson gave some information regarding the methods employed in Ireland.

Mr. R. L. Gaetz made the suggestion that the Horticultural Show be held in connection with the Fair, and that a building should be provided.
After some informal discussion the meeting adjourned.

W.C.T.U. COLUMN

(Contributed)

There sat two glasses filled to the brim,
On a rich man's table, rim to rim;
One was muddy and red as blood,
And one as clear as the crystal flood.

Said the gentleman to the paler brother,
"Let us tell the tales of the past to each other."
I can tell of banquet and revel and mirth,
And the proudest and grandest souls on earth.

Fell under my touch as though struck by blight,
Where I was king, for I ruled in might;
From the heads of kings I have torn the crown,
From the heights of fame I have had men down.

I have blasted many an honored name;
I have taken virtue and given shame;
I have tempted the youth with a sip, a taste,
That has made his future a barren waste.

Greater far greater than king am I,
Or than any army beneath the sky,
I have made the arm of the driver fail,
And sent the train from the iron rail.

I have made good ships go down at sea,
And the shrieks of the lost were sweet to me,
For they said, "Behold how great you are!"
Fame, strength, wealth, genius before you fall.

For your might and power are over all!
"Ho! ho! pale brother," laughed the wine,
"Can you boast of deeds as great as mine?"

Said the water glass: "I cannot boast of a king dethroned or a murdered host;
But I can tell of a heart once sad,
By my crystal drops made light and glad."

Of thirst I've quenched, of brow I've laved,
Of hands I have cooled, and souls I have saved;
I have leaped through the valley, dashed down the mountain,
Flowed in the river and played in the fountain.

Slept in the sunshine and dropped from the sky,
And everywhere gladdened the landscape and eye.
I have cooled the hot forehead of fever and pain;
I have made the parched meadows grow fertile with grain;

I can tell of the powerful wheel of the mill
That ground out the flour and turned a man's will.
I can tell of manhood debased by you,
That I have lifted and crowned anew.

I cheer, I help, I strengthen and aid;
I gladden the heart of man and maid;
I set the chained wine-captive free;
And all are better for knowing me.

These are the tales they told each other,
The glasses of wine, and the paler brother.
As they sat together filled to the brim,
On the rich man's table, rim to rim.

TURNING THE ARGUMENT.
Says the Continent, of Chicago: "It's gay sometimes to watch the liquor fellows try to transfer a pinching shoe to the other foot. Not long ago, bent on turning the farmers against prohibition, they got out a clasp story about the great use of grains in liquor manufacture being the main factor in keeping up the price of farm produce. Temperance people promptly countered on them with statistics showing that the breweries and distilleries as a matter of fact never use more than 2 per cent. of any American cereal crop or even of the corn crop. That silenced the whiskey arguers on that point pretty effectually. But it could not then have been guessed how soon they would be fleeing for refuge to the cover of those very figures that proved their earlier claim so foolish. For their appeal to the farmers has come back at them like a whole flock of buzzards flying home to roost. Somebody who had heard their boast about keeping the grain high, believed it, and went on and told it for a fact among the "workmen where 'cost of living' is the big issue just now. Then what a sudden, swift scramble there was among the liquor-making crowd to get away from the conclusion that beer causes bread to be dear. Those figures which the prohibitionist dug out, demonstrating that liquor manufacture uses far too little grain to affect the grain market one way or another, have all at once become quite the most popular set of facts in liquor literature. They are quoted with pathetic eagerness to have them accepted as final authority. All in all, the wisdom of investigating the amount of back kick in a gun before shooting it off is thoroughly and painfully understood in the whiskey camp today."

BORDEN THRILLS COUNTRY TWO HUNDRED MILLION MORE ACRES OF LAND

Ottawa Witnesses Most Enthusiastic and Splendid Banquet Ever Held.

BRITISH BLOOD WILL TELL IN ANY CRISIS.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—The most elaborate function of its kind ever held in Ottawa was the banquet tendered at the Chateau Laurier last night to the Right Hon. R. L. Borden, who had as his hosts the Conservative association of Ottawa. The magnificent dinner hall was filled with nearly 500 guests, and there would have been 500 more if the accommodation had been greater.

The prime minister was afforded a striking indication of the great esteem in which he is held by his party in the capital and of his popularity to himself and his government.

Mr. Borden's utterance was a clean-cut and concise reference in general terms to the greatness of the country and the political responsibilities which attach to its government, coupled with impressive remembrances of his experiences in the motherland.

EMPIRES DEEP

APPROPRIATION.
"What shall I say," asked Mr. Borden at the outset, "to a welcome such as this? I should be less than human if I did not appreciate it from the bottom of my heart. From the time we were awakened at Rimouski by the fireworks until we arrived at Ottawa this evening the welcome has been more than any man could desire, and all that any man can appreciate. Further, let me say that most sincerely did I appreciate the welcome by our fellow citizens of the province of Quebec."

"I have not come to make in any sense a party speech," said Mr. Borden. "I deeply appreciate the intensely kind welcome given me by the Liberal-Conservatives of this city and country, but I recognize at the time that Liberals as well as Liberal-Conservatives joined in the cordiality of this welcome. I fully believe that the rank and file of the Liberal party are just as earnest and loyal and patriotic for the welfare of our dominion as any citizens of the country. Canadians are all working for a common end—the good of all Canadians."

THE EMPIRE'S CAUSE.

"Sir George Reid spoke of imperial obligations, and touched upon matters of the greatest import. Let me say that on the other side we were received with every possible frankness and courtesy. We had the privilege with other ministers of the crown of being in council with the statesmen of the old land. We were admitted to the very Arcana of empire; yes, into the very secrets of the empire. We discussed questions of the greatest importance, and it is not for me to make any special announcement beyond that already given to the press."

"Every thinking man knows that the very existence of the empire depends on the security of the paths across the seas. When one considers the vast areas of empire stretched across the seas one cannot but be impressed by the greatness of the problem that confronts the dominions of the empire. But I think that the races which have built up the empire will not be distressed, but stimulated by the greatness of the task."

BRITAIN IS NOT DYING.

"Those who think that the great mother of nations is dead or dying are mistaken. The people of Britain are of the same sturdy stock that has built up the empire, and I am sure that if peril should come, those of the British race will be as true to their trust and firm to defend their ideals as their forefathers were of old. And that is saying a great deal."

"It may not be amiss to say that the influence of this great dominion and the other dominions of the empire will always be for peace in a peaceable way."

"It is not a cheerful prospect after 2,000 years of progress of Christianity that two great Christian nations should be devoting so much of their thoughts and strength to means of mutual destruction. But so long as these conditions prevail, we should be in a position to defend ourselves. At the same time I believe that the British race, where ever its members live, will stand prepared to do its duty and will do it."

TOAST TO AUSTRALIA.

A graceful compliment was paid by the guest of honor to Sir George Reid, Australian high commissioner to London, when he asked at the outset to be allowed to change the order of proceedings, and after obtaining permission, proposed a toast to "Our Great Sister Dominion Australia."

Sir George responded briefly, eulogizing the esteem in which the prime minister is held in London. To the toast "The Cabinet," proposed by Mr. J. A. Ellis, M.L.A., Ottawa West, Hon. Messrs. Foster, Pelletier and Howie replied.

"The eyes of the world are on Canada," said Hon. Mr. Foster. "We are no longer on a back street."

Hon. Mr. Pelletier paid a high compliment to the acting premier. Hon. George H. Peley, who had done the work at home while the rest were abroad, Mr. Pelletier dwelt on the splendid reception to Mr. Hon. Mr. Borden abroad, and said the press reports gave no adequate idea of its greatness. He referred to the premier as a worthy successor of Sir John Macdonald. He was glad that the old provinces of Quebec had been the first to greet the returning premier, and said the time had passed when it was necessary to be of certain breed or nationality to be a great man in Canada.

A GRAVE PERIL

"Kit" in Sept. Canada Monthly.

A very great danger menaces this whole continent in the enormous movement which began in the year of the World's Fair at Chicago. The summer school of philosophy, which was started at Owen Sound in 1896, was the outgrowth of the World's Fair Congress of Religions. Since that time nearly every sort of religious movement has been established and his particular vogue throughout the United States and Canada. The latest addition to this extraordinary religious craze is the of the Bahais, who are erecting to Chicago a magnificent temple—Machrak-ak-sakar—to represent their sect in the West.

The Swamis and Bahais who came to the great white fairland in 1893 lay along the shores of gray Michigan about 1893. They found that had happened on a very lucrative opportunity which they lost little time in taking by the forelock. These "proselytes" were instantly surrounded by bands of admiring women who followed them from the mid-way to those niches in the great buildings where they set up their idols and where they delivered their teachings. From the yellow loin cloth and bazaar's bowl to the glittering and glittering turban was a delightful transition, and it was not long until these dark-skinned Orientals with their amazingly beautiful eyes and slender forms, found themselves seated in midland's boudoir, the centre of admiring attentions, and waited on by the prettiest women in society, who seemed to be hypnotized by these Eastern mystics, these silent, grave, beautiful men who were so mysteriously alluring.

I could go deeper still into this so-called religious philosophy which these Eastern priests are teaching our Western women. I could repeat tales of the Orgies prevalent in the worship of the hideous, brutish goddess Kali, which take place not far from the city of Montreal. I could tell of the household labour done by American ladies—cooking, washing, scrubbing—for a certain Swami, and repeat the tales told of the beautiful woman who is at the head of this household. The peril lies not in the worship of sticks and stones and sun-cults, but in man-worship. "He was my mangled, wept little Jewish Alta Markheva over the body of old Dr. Latson. So far we have had no known traces among our Canadian women, but—"

"There are Mazdaznan centres in thirty cities of the United States as well as in Canada." And there is a temple to the Sun erected, or about to be erected, in Montreal. These two items have been published. And last week an article in a Canadian city the plate went round for "special contributions to our foreign missions to the Heavens."

London Papers Eulogize Canada's Premier On Recent Speech

Should Be Made Far Oftener One Declares.

London, Sept. 11.—Just the kind of speech, which, in the interest of all peoples under the British flag, needs to be made much oftener, said the Daily News, Liberal, this morning, commenting on Premier Borden's Ottawa speech.

"The people of the Dominion know little of the British people at home," the writer goes on, "and therefore tend to take quite literally the jeremiads of political tacticians. This is a serious error and may lead the dominions to undervalue the worth of contributions, while it lays them out to panic mongers. If the people of the overseas dominions appreciate truly the strength and vitality of these islands they will be 'proof against these appeals to the German peril.'"

"Let reason, not ungoverned by emotion, dictate the manner and extent of their sharing the common tasks of the empire."

HEIGHTEN ENGLAND'S ESTEEM.

"High as Mr. Borden has already placed himself among the statesmen of the empire by what he has said and did during his recent visit, he raised himself yet higher in the Old Country's regard by his speech at Ottawa," declares the Daily Telegraph, "and, continuing: 'We are far from thinking it strange that the Canadian premier should have received such a favorable impression of the men of these isles. Even when we have never cast a doubt upon the abundance in this people of Great Britain of all the qualities which render for national greatness, but it is unusual for a speaker in Mr. Borden's position to say this and say it with so much emphasis to an audience in one of the sister states. It has been one of the things which we have thought better unsaid. There have been vague suspicions of a tendency on the part of the motherland to overvalue herself upon the score of greater age, wealth or maturity of civilization. The South African war taught us, however, how readily his attitude could be dropped at the all of stern facts. The stern realities of the existing international situation are not less stern, and Premier Borden has not delayed to say the right things, as he is resolved to do the right thing in the cause of closer imperial feeling and fellowship.'"

A Skating Rink

To the Editor.

Sir—I want to say a few words in favor of a covered skating rink. As the sports of Red Deer had boasted half as hard for a real good skating rink as they did this summer for baseball, we would now have a rink of which we might feel justly proud and a place where the young people of the town could congregate during the long winter nights and enjoy themselves to their hearts' content. I hope the Council will try to build one. If they can build one at Lacombe and other neighboring towns, surely we can build one in Red Deer. Perhaps if we women took the matter up we might accomplish something.

H. Clifton gave them an excellent dinner, and afterwards the party adjourned to the house of F. Edwards, where songs, recitations and speeches were indulged in till late in the evening.

The cup formerly won in Red Deer was presented to Rev. C. Greaves at the wish of the old club members.

THE MISSION

South Africa, New Zealand and Australia know what a Christian mission from the Old Country means. Would that some of our brethren from the Dominions of the Empire could come and give us their testimony. Anyway we know that they would say, "If you get such and such a mission, don't miss it." Now the opportunity is at hand. To this, the greatest self-governing Dominion of the Empire, a similar band of missionaries is coming.

To all members and adherents of the Church of England in this town and district, and all who desire to come, is the invitation of welcome extended. It is an invitation to hear the greatest and best message from a special witness.

From Sunday, September 29th, to Sunday, October 6th, the opportunity hereof.

The Rev. Guy Pearce, a well known and experienced missionary, will make St. Luke's Church his centre.

THE MISSOURI GIRL.

"The Missouri Girl," famous the country over as "The favorite comedy of the continent," will be seen at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday, September 19th.

Many people will not doubt say, "Why, they cannot play it on this stage" or "They won't give the whole show here," &c., but the management guarantees the entire production. The fact that the Company carries two complete sets of scenery (special, the same, which will suit all the local stage needs, assures the same show exactly that is given in the regular city theatres. The production is a clean, up-to-date American comedy with music and high class specialties interspersed throughout, and you'll laugh till you're blue in the face. The price, 10c, 15c, 20c, 25c and $1.00.

Attempted Murder at Blackfalds

Friday night last, Constable Gillies, of Blackfalds, and formerly of the Red Deer force, had a narrow escape from being murdered at that place. A number of Italians drove into the town and started to drink. One of them flourished a knife and threatened to use it on one of his companions. Constable Gillies arrested him and another one of the gang interfered. He went out the front door and Gillies took his prisoner out the back way, handcuffed. Outside the man fell or tripped, pulling the constable on top of him. The other Italian, then sprang on the constable's back, and had his wicked-looking knife raised to strike, when C. P. Proulx, an employee of the Imperial Hotel, stepped up his arm. The man then broke away and hid in a woodpile, but was eventually captured and both men were locked up. The first man was heavily fined, and the second committed for trial on the serious charge of attempted murder. Constable Gillies is to be congratulated on his narrow escape.

Mrs. Creighton's Address

The assembly room of the school was fairly well filled Friday night last to hear the excellent address given by Mrs. Creighton, wife of the late Bishop Creighton, of London, England. The subject "What we can do for the next generation," was handled in an able and lucid manner. She said we owed two things to the rising generation, namely, health and education. It was not hard to give people of this great and glorious west health, but it was harder to give them an education. She divided education into several branches. Mere book learning was not education. We should give our child a moral and spiritual as well as intellectual training; and then the nation would be better for their having lived. She was listened to with much pleasure by those present, and a hearty vote of thanks was rendered her by the meeting at the close. The chair was occupied by Rev. C. W. Moore, and proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

Lyric Theatre

At the Lyric Theatre, Friday night, the motion pictures of the Flynn-Johnson contest at Las Vegas, will be shown. The regular programme will also be offered. The Edmonton Journal has the following to say about the pictures: The second day of the Flynn-Johnson fight pictures engagement in this city, saw the diminishing of the crowds, and the Orpheum was compelled to hang the "Standing Room Only" sign out on several occasions. This only accentuates the fact that there is just as much doubt of the outcome of the bout as in the much-disputed River-Wolcott fight, which took place on the same day, and the distinct views show that the Pueblo Fireman is a much tougher fighter than his most performances would lead one to suspect. The pictures will hold the boards today and tomorrow and are well worth seeing.

BITS and AUGERS DRAW KNIVES

NOBODY can do good work with poor tools. A poor mechanic can do better work with good tools than a good workman can do with poor tools. So as much or more depends on the tools as on the man; besides good tools save time.

Realizing this as we do, all of our goods of this kind are of the best standard makes and fully guaranteed. You can pay less of course, but you get cheapness and not satisfaction, good work or much of anything else.

We have a complete stock of Augers and bits, and plain 8 and 10 inch Braces, as well as Ratchets and Ball Bearing Braces.

WE STAND FOR PROGRESS

The Man Who Can Afford To Rent Can Afford to Buy

In almost all cases the man who can afford to rent a good home can afford to buy one.

The small cash payment rarely goes above a modest savings bank balance—and the rest is just like paying rent. "Like" it in the amounts to be paid—but there the likeness stops. For a large part of your payments go to reducing the purchase price of the property—each payment being another step towards "free and clear" ownership of a home.

We have a pretty home for sale on particularly easy terms—a small cash payment and balance like rent.

It is a new home, exceptionally well built—best of material throughout; 5 rooms and hall; splendid water. You might come and see about this home. Come now while you think of it.
